VILLIANY

Last night while on her way to visit her sister, Mrs. Smith, out the new Pricedale road, Mrs. Cora Nale of Delaware street, had a narrow escape from becoming the prey to a stranger who was secluded along the road and who attempted to assault her.

The assault was attempted about 8 o'clock before it was quite dark. When Mrs. Nale arrived at a lonely spot in the road a burly foreigner leaped from behind a tree and took hold of her. Mrs. Nale put up a hard fight, but the villian grappled with her. tearing her clothing, choking her and almost stripping her. She screamed at the top of her voice and soon several men rushed to the scene of the cries and the man was frightened away. He took down over the hill into a ravine and the men after him with stones, and clubs. Mrs. Nale recovered her fright and was accompanied to her home.

This is another indication of the dangers women subject themselves to to travel this road after nighifall unaccompanied. On two former occasions women were attacked by bold men and badly frightened.

Defeated

Saturday the St. Leonard's Lyceum traveled to Fayette City and met defeat by the score of 7 to 1. This was practically the same team that represented Fayette City in the Monongahela valley league last year. Though considerably out-classed the boys put up a good game of ball, and their fielding, together with Barnum's stick work and "Hen" Wilson's usually good fielding on first, were the features of the game, Wilson robbing the Lyceums of at least two hits when hits meant runs. Ryan, though wild at times, pitched verp nicely, his opponents securing eight hits and really earning but three runs, which for Fayette City is execeptionally well. The two Joes, King and Destefano played a good game, the latter scoring the Lyceum's only run after doubling in the fourth, going to third on an infield hit, and scoring on a sacrifice fly. This was Fayette City's opening game and was preceeded by an automobile parade through the principal streets.

Court

John Piasco of Pittsburgh was the first prisoner to have a hearing this morning before Burgess Dunlap, he being charged with being drunk and disorderly. He was fined $2.00 and costs or $4.00 which he paid.

Joe Upyard of Weirton, W. Va., came to town in search of work, but decided to visit all the saloons before going to the mill gates. Consequently he was arrested, charged with being drunk and disorderly. He was fined $2.00 and costs or $4.00 which he paid and departed.

Paul Merick of Nowhere, was charged before the burgess with being drunk and disorderly. He was discharged and told to get out of town as this was no place for anyone but law abiding citizens.

Elhi Bohto of Knox avenue, was arrested yesterday on information brought by his lanlord. It seems that yesterday Elhi took on too much force water and tried to break in the door of the house. He paid a fine of $3.00 and costs or $5.00.

Ready

The Lindh Institute in the Barker building, corner Sixth and Donner, has undergone extensive improvements, and is now in as good condition as before Mr. Lindh sold the place and left town.

The entire building has been thoroughly cleaned and papered, the floors painted, new bath rooms installed, equipped with electric cabinets and all modern appliances for treating the ills human flesh is heir to, and Mr. Lindh gives the business his personal attention. He is ably assisted by Miss Ehlhelm and Mr. Burns who were associated with him before he disposed of his business. Many patients are now taking the Lindh treatments, some of whom remain in the hospital part of the institute. He gives the Swedish method and has had wonderful success in treating rheumatism and all kinds of muscular and nervous diseases. He will be glad to welcome his many frineds at the institute and in fact all those afflicted with ills he claims to treat.

Not Our Jimmie

A few days ago an article appeared in these columns about a trial in Greensburg wherein James Kennedy of Monessen was one of the principals. All who know James Kennedy, the stone contractor, certainly know that he was not the person referred to, and for the benefit of the general public we are pleased to state that the two men while bearing the same name, are no relation whatever.

Mr. Kennedy the contractor, is one of the pioneer citizens of the town and bears the best of reputation, and we are glad to reiterate he is not mixed up in any scandalous affairs.

Error

Attention is called to an error reported in a recent issue of this paper in connection with the Monessen-Charleroi hospital report for the month of April. The highest number of patients in the hospital for one day was 31 instead of 5, the highest number of patients admitted in one day being five. The highest number of patients for two days was 30. and the highest number for three days 29. These figures are considerable of an increase over March.

SERIAL STARTS TODAY

Tonight in this paper that famous story "Who Pays" appears in its first installment. This is one of the most powerful moving picture stories yet produced. It will appear in the Olympic theatre Thursday. You should see the first installment of this story and you will want to see every other installment.

But don't attempt to see the picture unless you hove read the story. We are making it possible to read each section before seeing the pictures. Each section will appear in this paper concluding the day before the show each week. Don't fail to start reading the story in todays issue and get ready for the picture at the Olympic Thursday.

Some section of the story will fit in your own life or the life of someone you know or have known. When a husband deserts his wife and children who pays? Somebody pays for every sin. Sometimes the sins of the fathers are visited upon the generations following and sometimes they are visited upon the father himself. Sometimes the woman suffers. But the question in this story of fiction is "Who Pays?"

Last week in police court a mother appeared heart broken and sobbing. Two of her wayward boys were on trial. She had five other children at home, one a baby a year old. the other three were mere infants. The father had deserted them, leaving them homeless and penniless. She was up against the rough edges of a cruel world, where there is little sympathy. All who looked upon this sad scene where the hand of the law could lend no aid, where the ends of justice could not meet, looked upon it but to inquire Who Pays?

No person interested in moving pictures should miss the first installment of this powerful piece of fiction. No person interested in the great educational and moral questions of life should fail to see this grappling story that will hold your attention like the mighty magnetc powers of the orator. But before seeing the picture read the story, starting today in this paper.

Good Show

Today—Two extra fine features, Charles Chaplin "In the Park." Now we don't know exactly, but they say he can make you laugh while in sleep. he can cure you if the temperature is 104. he can bring you back to life if you are dead. They even go so far as to say he can cure your rheumatism. pleurisy and laziness. He can do more than that. he can cure you from love sickness, and he can make you learn how to love also., Now of coure we don't know. but that is what they say, and we are inclined to believe all they say. If you don't believe it. you had better come to the Olympic theatre to investigate and find out for sure about these wonderful and magic cures.

The next truly wonderful soul stirring drama is a tale of the struggle between love and religion. Bertha, the daughter of old Tamor, the Rabbi, falls in love with a Christian young man. The beautiful daughter of Israel is wrecked on the wheel of warring religions. until her spirit is torn assunder and her soul flees the broken body. The title is "The Father's Faith." It is in three reels. featuring Cleo Madison. Murdock McQuarrie and Joe King. If we could write a book of ten thousand pages we would not be able to say one half about the Christian martyrs of the Jewish faith. Rivers upon rivers of human blood were shed for our faith. for our country, for our love. Turn your eys now toward Europe and see the great struggle of life and death of the warring nations. For what? For only an idea for our faith and unfortunately the war will exist as long as there will exist upon the face of the sinful earth more than one living being, human or animal. You must see this picture today.

$1,100 Gone

The savings of many months amounting to $1100 was taken from the home of George Palishak on Schoonmaker avenue last night. and today the family is almost destitute.

The money was kept in a small trunk in a rear room of the home which is in the alley near Third street and a door opens out from the room to the porch. Some time during the night the door was opened and the trunk and all of its contents taken. Several months ago Palishak drew his money out of the bank and decided he would keep it at home where he felt it would be safer. and it was safe until last night.

Today every member of the family is heart broken for it means the saving of a long time. There is no clue that is likely to lead to the identification of the thief. At 11 oclock last night a member of the family heard a noise, but there was no suspicion. and this morning when the wife got up she saw the door that leads into the room open, and an investigation revealed the missing trunk.

Success

The Rev. Dr. Max Wertheimer, the converted Jewish Rabbi began a series of revival meetings in the First Baptist church last night. There was a large attendance who listened to one of the most interesting discourses ever delivered in Monessen. The subject was "The Queerest Book in the Bible," and this the speaker said appeared to him to be the book of Ecclesiastics. The Doctor held his audience spell bound, while he reviewed with scrutinizing language some of the apparent contradictions and illogical conclusions of this book.

Dr. Wertheimer also referred to the many things in which Solomon sought for happiness, only to be bitterly disappointed at each step of his efforts and all becausse he relied more upon his own judgements than the word of God.

There was an earnest appeal to all to seek for and follow divine guidance instead of our own worldly wisdom. Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 there will be the beginning of a series of chart talks on "From Egypt to Canaan." All are heartily invited to come to these services.

MEETING

At a meeting of the Executive and Program committees of the Board of Trade last evening at 5 o'clock in the office of President Alfred Tanzer, plans were laid for the reception and entertainment of Wm. J. H. Boetcker, commissioner of the Pittsburgh Inside association, Friday afternoon and evening of this week. The occasion of the visit of this interesting and instructive speaker is to speak at the Board of Trade meeting this month.

While in the town he will be the guest of George S. Bowes and take dinner with a number of the business men and merchants at one of the local hotels. In the afternoon Mr. Beotcker will speak to the High schools in the new High school auditorium and visit some of our mills. In the evening he will address the Board of Trade after the regular business meeting which will be held either in council chamber or in the Ruthenian hall.

Should the women of the town desire to attend the meeting and hear the speaker, likely this hall will be rented for the occasion. Notices will be given the members of the place in their regular monthly announcements tomorrow.

Mr. Boetcker's subject will be virtually the same afternoon and evening, "How to Make a Bigger and Better Town." He is said to be a finished speaker, well versed on topics pertaining to civic questions and is considered a "great catch" for Monessen on these occasions.

—The Ladies Adult Bible class of the Christian church will hold a fishing social in the church basement on Tuesday evening. May 18. A fine program is to be rendered and also a lunch. Admission 15 cents. 1t fp

Individual Responsibility

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene by Samuel G. Dixon, M. D. LL. D., Commissioner of Health

When in our morning prayer we ask to be spared from sickness, let us pause to realize that health is often in our own hands to keep or fritter away.

We are often individually responsible for our personal health and in a degree for the health of those about us. In the vast majority of instances, sickness is the result of indiscretion which is not unconscious though we may not stop to calculate the results.

If we knowingly jeopardize our individual health and risk illness on the chance that we will escape "this once," we are putting ourselves in the same category with the criminal who risks his freedom each time he breaks the law. Ethically the one is no better than the other. The man who wilfully transgresses nature's laws by excesses may have far less control than one who violate the penal code.

If each individual member of a community failed to exercise control in the matter of his bodily well being, it woud be dangerously immortal. If we are to prove the general health of our nation it must be through stimulating individual citizens to appreciate their responsibilities.

Each man, woman or child should try and measure what individual health means. He should be brought to realize how easily it can slip away never to return. A single violatiin of a law of nature may mean death or what is worse a lingering illness.

We are vigilant in watching our money lest it slip away and leave us impoverished, and yet we are prodigal with our physical resources, forgetting that the poorest individual is he who has lost his health.

No More Running Sores

Craig's Drug Store Sells an Ointment Called San Cura That is a Positive Relief

It matters not how old, persistent or poisonous the sore is, San Cura Ointment, the powerful antiseptic, will draw out the poison and promptly heal the sore.

So sure of this are the owners, the Thompson Medical company that they have authorized Craig's Drug store to return the price if San Cura Ointment doesn't do all this paper says it will do. No fairer offer was ever made.

B. D. Dutton, Titusville, Pa., says: "My arm was covered with twenty-four running sores and swollen to twice its natural size. San Cura Ointment relieved the pain, drew out the poison and healed the arm in an incredibly short time. It is the greatest compound for healing I ever used."

The healing powers of San Cura Ointment are little short of marvelous. It gives relief and is guaranteed to help salt rheum, eczema, bleeding, itching or protruding piles, ulcers, boils, carbuncles, chapped hands and chilblains. In cuts, burns, scalds and bruises, it allays pain and is healing. 25c and 50c a jar.

WHO PAYS? The PRICE of FAME! by EDWIN BLISS

(Copyright, 1915, by Pathe Exchange, Inc. All Moving Picture Rights and all Foreign Copyrights Strictly Reserved.)

FIRST STORY

I.

Prof. Carl de Retsky flung a regretful glance at the hills, hurling their rugged battlements against the twilight that marked a definite end to his vacation. Vacation—rest from the weary grind, the loathsome task of training voices that could never be other than mediocre, voices that tortured his finely tuned nerves so exquisitely he had been forced to these same hills that the vast silences might perform their healing function. He opened his mouth, laving his throat with the clear air, drinking in great drafts of it as though trying to store away a reserve fund of that silence for the future. And then—

Then the voice reached out to him. Faintly, at first, but steadily increasing in volume until the silence was put to utter rout.

Such a voice! Rivaling in purity, clarity and sweetness the voices of nature. Dazed by his incredulous delight, the singing master followed the sounds till he found himself, leaning against a farm house fence, staring at a young man upon the porch, his handsome face pressed against the bars of a canary's cage, his eyes glistening with delight as he held vocal contest with the fluffy little creature. A rich, warm red came from beneath the heavy coat of tan as he caught sight of the stranger, halting his song abruptly as he inquiringly approached.

"Such a voice! Such an organ—" De Retsky stopped abruptly as he found his enthusiasm carrying him away "I have never heard the song before," he continued inquiringly.

"Song!" The young chap laughed. "I was just teasing the bird—that's all."

"Teasing the bird!" the singing teacher repeated the words in bewilderment. He drew a card from his pocket as the youth smiled. He did not care to be laughed at—De Retsky. The young man caught his displeasure instantly.

"Thank you," he murmured gratefully. "I was smiling because my father just told me that my voice didn't go very far when it came to killing weeds"

"You should cultivate that voice—such voices belong to the world and not to the individual," De Retsky frowned.

He stopped as he noticed the change of expression that had come over the singer's face as he studied the card with evident recognition.

"Cultivate my voice?" His voice was husky, hoarse. "Cultivate it! But who will pay for the job—who pays?" He looked about him, at the tiny farm house, the small farm, the shabby outhouses, all indicative of small means

"Yes—that's it. Who pays?" De Retsky muttered, a faint smile upon his lips. For he knew the ultimate payment would not be found within so small a space; would not be taken from wealth or that which went to make wealth, but from the human heart. Whose heart?

II.

"—and for a long time, my dear Bella, I could not keep that voice from my ears. Everything was there except the training. As you know, I have heard them all and have not been rated the worst myself, but for natural singing quality I have never heard this young Henry Merwin's superior"

"It merely shows," he continued, "how possible it is to dodge duty. That voice belonged to the world But as I recalled what the struggle meant what must be gone through before the summit is attained, I did not have the courage. Like a coward, a traitor to my art, I fled." He smiled whimsically. "But it was to be I returned to my work, to the horrible grind. I listened to the sounds that could never be made into song and always I was hearing the voice of the farmer boy who teased the bird."

"And my little words of encouragement had fallen upon a soil worthy of that divine voice. Henry Merwin found his way to the wagon seat of a milk wagon. That was what he did when he found me, that is what he is doing now—driving a milk wagon—"

"I was in a laundry," the great soprano murmured softly as though to herself.

De Retsky started to speak, but the expression on her face deterred him

"He is married" she queried abruptly.

"Married the little beauty I saw him with that evening as I returned to my hotel—the little country girl he ran to with the news."

"And I suppose she was happy in his joy, happy at the encouragement you had given him!" A lurking bitterness was in the singer's tones, a note that caused the professor to look at her sharply.

"Little Dora twisted her ankle one morning while I was busy with a pupil. Young Merwin was driving past and helped the child. He recognized me immediately, though I had quite forgotten him—you see he was nothing but a voice to me—but when he recalled that evening and the scene—" He shrugged apologetically, sheepishly. "Well, I knew that it was Fate I offered to cultivate his voice and take my pay in the future, when it had proved itself."

"And you wish me to listen when he comes?"

"He is waiting now." De Retsky smiled as he consulted his watch. "He is always early for his lesson, unwilling to lose a moment of the time." He nodded to the maid who ushered into the room a blushing, roughly-clad young man, who flushed hotly as he returned the friendly pressure of the great vocalist's hand, then turned naturally to the piano as she expressed the desire to hear his voice.

Her critical sense was swept away even as De Retsky's had been before her, and the judgment of the artist upon a tyro gave place to unmixed delight as Merwin lavishly poured forth his song

She sighed as De Retsky turned upon her, smiling delightedly at the obvious impression his pupil had made

"You were right, De Retsky, right," she murmured "It is a voice that belongs to the world, a voice that does not belong to you any longer. You are the singer, old friend, more than the great teacher of voice production The is The Voice It belongs to Spreglia of Paris, Lamperti in Berlin, old Vanucchini of Florence. Sydney Dalton, here in the United States, in New York, shall have it finally. And he will coach, will make the opera singer out of the man with The Voice. Oh, I shall attend to all that. I must have my share in this discovery, De Retsky."

She turned to where the singer had been and De Retsky frowned as he saw his protege had slipped away under cover of the great vocalist's enthusiasm. He looked at her uneasily for some sign of irritation, but a smile lurked about the corners of her mouth.

"The little country girl who was feeding the turkeys," she said softly, a curious glitter in her eyes as though a vagrant tear had somehow found a resting place there. "Ah, well, it will make her happy, De Retsky. And happiness should be crowded upon her now."

The two who had eaten of the fruit avoided meeting her eyes, as if in fear.

And their fear seemed by some odd freak to have transferred itself to a tiny cottage in the outskirts of the city, where a little woman bent her head lower over her knitting while her husband joyously, eagerly told for the twentieth time of his experience.

Trying Out His Voice.

She could not analyze the mixture of emotions tugging at her very heart strings, the joyous ache, the bad-sweet ecstasy, the torturing delight all struggling there for mastery

"Europe, Ann! The greatest teachers of the world! Just think of it! Why, it seems impossible! Wealth, fame, honor, everything—"

The fear that had trembled so long a time upon the fringe of her lashes dropped to the tiny shoe upon which she was knitting, clung there until his eyes rested upon it

"Aren't you happy, Ann?" he repeated.

She nodded a trifle jerkily, then as she lifted her eyes to meet his own. Honest eyes they were, loving, worshipful eyes they were, patient eyes, the eyes that belong to women whose souls are so sensitive they chill before the mere shadow of impending tragedy.

"So happy, Henry, that—I'm afraid of it—of my happiness," she answered bravely.

III.

Ann shivered again under something she read in Madam Holmes' eyes. She had felt it even before the woman crossed the threshold, had been feeling it in ever increasing volume while De Retsky and her husband outlined plans for his operatic studies abroad. The great singer had been silent, strangely silent since it was she who was doing the financing of that voice. And now the wife knew that madam was about to speak and with her eyes pleaded to the celebrity—as woman to woman—for pity, for charity. And madam shrank before that look, even while her lips tightened

"Of course," she said slowly, "I shall provide for your wife while you are abroad, Mr. Merwin."

Though she had been expecting a blow, though she had nerved herself for the worst, Ann could not repress the little cry of incredulous pain that leaped from her lips Her hands sought her heart gropingly, the hands that still gripped the unfinished shoe.

"You mean—you mean that I am not to go—that Henry is to go alone—to leave me and—and—"

"A student should have no distraction in his studies."

Ann felt something go dead within her Her hands went out in groping fashion toward her husband

"Henry you—you want to leave—" She could not finish for the great, choking sob constricting her throat, suffocating her.

He wheeled upon her fiercely, plunged into a rage of his own creating, but madam flashed him a warning look as Ann sank back in her chair

"My dear," in the great soprano's voice were all the tones that had quickened tears in the hearts of audiences throughout the world, "you must not make it any harder than it is already. Don't you know that I understand; that I am a woman, and that I understand your pain at parting?" She moved a step closer, placing her hand upon Ann's shoulder and turning upon the two men.

"You have your choice, Mr. Merwin—milkman or a Voice. I had the choice and Voice won. It has brought me fame, wealth, honor, glory; it has lost me all that my heart would have clung to did I consider happiness alone. I do not say that it is always so, but the price of fame is often misery The price of Fame must be paid and Fame is a hard bargainer"

Ann looked up eagerly, timidly, yet with a strange ferocity to catch the impression upon her husband. What she read upon his face filled her with swift self-reproach

"I think I understand," she whispered softly. "I want the fame for him."

DEFENDING ATLANTIC COAST AGAINST IMAGINARY ENEMY

New York, May 18—When the Atlantic Fleet steams out of New York harbor this afternoon, after its polished bow to society, it will be divided into strategic divisions for the defense of the Atlantic coast against imaginary enemies. Rear Admiral Beatty will command a small fleet which will represent the armade of the enemy, and the remainder of the fleet will try to defend the coats from Cape Hatteras to Eastport, Maine. The elaborate plans for the practical defense maneuvers are not made public, but it was given out at Washington that the operations would resemble closely those which the fleet would be obliged to use for a sudden defense. The umpire of the mimic attack and defense will be Real Admiral Knight, head of the war college, who will make his headquarters on the Brooklyn. The unique war game will last several weeks.

SPORTING NOTES

The injury to Herzog was a big blow to the Reds strategy. Johnson's spike went deep into the former's left forearm.

Montreal will have eight weeks of horse racing beginning Saturday.

Howard Drew, the fast colored sprinter of the University of Southern California, has decided not to go east this summer. Instead he took a railroad job.

The fight dopesters pick Jim Coffey as the best to go against Jess Willard. Willard is expected to be ready for battle after his circus engagement.

King Colo will soon be ready to take the mound for Wild Bill, who claims the Yankees will be very much in the running when Cole is in condition.

Dave Fultz will sign up with Cupid next month, says a report from Connecticut, which also alleges Davy used to trundle his bride when she was a baby.

Saturday, June 12 has been set for the Latonia Derby. The Latonia season opens on June 8 and continues until July 5.

Jerome D. Travers, the veteran golfer, and former national champion, will also join the ranks of teh benedicts this summer.

Polo season at Philadelphia opens on Saturday, and another tournament starts at Bryn Mawr, nearby.

The Cincinnatti Reds expect to see Marsans in the fold again at any time. He leaped a year ago.

London gets another 20 round bout for May 31, Owen Moran and Lew Edwards having been signed up for the Lonsdale featherweight belt and $2,500.

The annual rowing event between Harvard and Cornell is as keen as ever this year. The race will be pulled off at Ithaca on Saturday.

EUGENIC MARRIAGES

Will insure to this country a healthier and more intelligent "family of the future" and many a woman, obviously unfit for marriage, has had her health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the most successful remedy for female ills the world has ever known. Enormous quantities of roots and herbs are used annually in making this good old fashioned remedy and no woman who suffers from female ills should lose hope until she has tried it.

Individual Can Help

Harrisburg, Pa., May 18—Every citizen and taxpayer in the state is in accord with Governor Brumbaugh on the subject of "State Wide Good Roads Day." Each believes that the benefits that will be obtained will more than compensate for the interruption in the daily routine of the individual.

But nearly every man who is not attached to some organization which has interested itself in the project is anxious to know what he can do to help. The state highway department has issued a statement which answers this call. It tells every citizen that it is his duty, first to arrange his plans so that he will be able to devote Wednesday, May 26 to physical labor on the highways of the the commonwealth; secondly should this prove impossible, that he should contribute financially to the Good Roads association of his county; thirdly, that if he is not ailied with such an organization that he should provide a substitute to do the physical work on that day.

But if the individual is able to work and can take that day off from his daily pursuits, let him shoulder a pick or shovel, or let him take his teams or his wheelbarrow and go out on the country road nearest his home and there put in a long day at hard physical labor, getting honestly tired out and then let him return to his home, worn and weary, but satisfied that he has done the best he could to aid his state.

HEAR RATE PROTEST FROM SEVEN OHIO CITIES

Toledo, Ohio, May 18—The Interstate Commerce Commission will give a hearing today in this city on the complaint of the trade associations of Toledo, Detroit, Springfield, Canton, Columbus, Dayton and Cleveland, against the present freight rates from this section to points in the South. Through rates are sought, in order to meet the competition of other sections enjoying through rates to these southern points.

HARRISBURG MAN IS NOW HAPPY

I. E. Beckwith Says Wonderful Remedy Gave Him Great Help.

I. E. Beckwith of Harrisburg, Penn., was a victim of disorders of the stomach and intestinal tract. He tried treatment after treatment. Nothing gave him relief.

Then one day he discovered Mayr's Wonderful Remedy—and soon was happy.

Mr. Beckwith wrote to Geo. H. Mayr, the maker of the remedy and for twenty years the leading druggist of Chicago.

"I believe that Mayr's Wonderful Remedy is the greatest stomach remedy on earth. One dose would convince any one who is troubled with his stomach of its wonderful merits. It removed some of the most awful looking stuff from my stomach. I have taken other remedies, but they never helped me."

Mayr's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and around the heart. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee—if not satisfactory money will be returned.
